

IDLE YOUTH RELEASE NEW SINGLE 'DISCONNECT'

OUT 17TH JUNE

London-based band, Idle Youth release their next single Disconnect, an energetic yet chilled synth pop song that spans new wave, post punk and all things 80's, whilst remaining present day. Mastered By legendary engineer Noel Summerville, Disconnect lyrically discusses our over-reliance on technology and it's inevitable knock on effects to our relationships with the world.

Inspired by Fyodor Dostoyevski's 'The Brothers Karamazov', questions of reality and free will are questioned. A dream pop feel runs ever present through the song, musically and lyrically.

There are three gigs in support of the single, all around the weekend of its release - each in their own unique setting around London engaging fans in new and convergent ways. The single will also be backed up with a remix e.p including dance, dub reggae, and acoustic takes on the song.

Idle Youth on the new track, "I think it's fair to say that most people have an unhealthy reliance on technology and we aren't any different. It's something we are all aware of, yet can't function in this version of life without it. I get that. But this song just serves as a reminder that nothing can substitute for felt experience with one another. Always remember that."

Idle Youth are an Electro pop 4 piece from Camden, London; incorporating synthesizers, huge bass hooks, 80's drum sounds and deep and resonate vocal delivery. Featuring Kieran on bass, Mick on guitar, Jon on vocals and synths, and Steve on drums - post punk and new wave are the biggest influences on their music. However, a visual influence crucially plays a heavy part in both the aesthetic and overall sound of the band. Using minimalism, luminism, and Japanese cyberpunk, the band create an unforgettable and unique live show - blending neon soaked visuals with larger than life musical delivery that can't help but be prodigious.

Disconnect by Idle Youth is released 17th June.
