

YETZT

BIO

Yetzt are an Anglo-German Post-Punk / Alternative Rock band formed in late 2019 comprising of Kie Dawson, Tjorben Reimer, Felix Riedel, and Tobias Kraller. The title track of their last EP "Normal Things" perfectly describes the band's sound: a blend of diverse musical backgrounds creates a dark yet energizing sound that is seemingly about to fall apart, but that never does. The melancholic, mysterious beginning of the song is leading into a guitar heavy climax that gets bigger and bigger, conveying a message of similar size: "The cogs in machines dropping their dreams just for the roof above their heads". By playing concerts in Loophole, Schokoladen, Bechereck and similar places, Yetzt became part of the Berlin underground alt-rock scene and is known for making their guests dance until sweat drips from the ceiling. Their DIY concerts turn art-café, skateparks and even living rooms into vibrant rock venues with a close, intimate connection to their fans.

QUOTE ABOUT THE SONG

The song was written after the singer's breakup. Although worried it would be seen as a treatise on relationships, the song comes across more as a journal entry at the end of a deep romantic connection. It oscillates between dynamics like emotions during a division: a whisper like quietness to a roaring blast, heartfelt melancholy to visceral confusion.
